

Montgomery Receives Top Honors for Sewer Plant

At the April 24th annual meeting of the Water Pollution Control Association held at the Excelsior Hotel in Provo, Clyde Montgomery, superintendent of the Wasatch County Sewage Treatment Facility was awarded the coveted 'Best Operated Lagoon System' plaque for the excellent operation of the Wasatch County facility.

This award sets the facility apart as the best operated sewage treatment plant of the approximately one hundred plants that are in operation in the state of Utah. This award is limited to those communities that operate lagoon type treatment services. The judging for this award was determined by an unannounced inspection of the treatment plant by a committee of operators of other treatment plants in the state.

It was noted by Mr. Montgomery that the inspection by operators of other facilities in many ways is much more critical than the inspections that are conducted on a regular basis by the Environmental Protection Agency. The areas that are inspected include plant records, operational records and overall appearance and operation.

Clyde Montgomery also stated that "this is a long way from the time that we would go to the conventions having the distinction of running one of the most inadequate plants in the state." In this he is referring to the old plant that he operated for Heber City but has now been replaced by the consolidated treatment plant that serves both Heber City and Midway.

the NALS Association two runners stopped over in Heber Sunday on the 17th day of the Lou Gehrig Race for Life.

Marvin Skagerberg (age 47) of New York and Malcolm Campbell (age 50) of Grantham, England, both Masters Category athletes in the field of multi-day ultra-running will race for 92 days across 3,499 miles with only six days of rest. The two will run an average of 42 miles daily in predetermined races, the shortest being 20 miles and longest being 64 miles, with the winner having the best aggregate time. Both men are established runners and have set national age group records on foreign soil, as well as on their home turf.

The race will be supported by active local, regional and national promotion by the National ALS Foundation, and backed by local will be the involvement of public figures such as Reggie Jackson, National ALS Foundation Chairman; The Honorable William Simon, Race Chairman; and Jacob K. Javits, former Senator and himself an ALS patient, who is also Honorary Race Chairman. In addition, Lee MacPhail, President of Major League Baseball's Player Relations Committee, is helping to organize major league baseball support on behalf of the run, a tie-in particularly appropriate in honor of Gehrig, the legendary Yankee first baseman struck down by ALS at the age of 39.

Among the corporate sponsors to back the race are Coca-Cola USA and the Ford Division of Ford Motor Co. In addition to its sponsorship, Ford Division will provide all support vehicles needed for the race.
